WHY RUSSIANS PUT SHIRTS ON OUTSIDE COATS

(By Associated Press.)
BERLIN, Germany.—Russian general staff reports have frequently mentioned night attacks in which the soldiers wore their shirts over their uniform coats. A majority of the readers have puzzled in vain for an answer to why this should be done, and have assumed that it was to help make the attacker invisible against the snow.
Capt. Berthold Walter of the German army now comes forward with the explanation. The shirts are worn, not to conceal the wearers, but rather so that the attackers may be able to distinguish each other in the darkness and the confusion of battle. The custom also is not new but historically old.
It was begun centuries ago by the French, and was called "camisade" from the Latin "camisia" or shirt. The term gradually became more general and was used to designate any kind of a night fight, whether the soldiers wore their shirts inside or outside of their coats.
The first recorded "camisade" took place at the capture of Poitiers in 1419. The last one of importance was the storming of Liege by the troops of the late General von Emmich.

VELVET AND FUR

Velvet is being used very largely this season, particularly in the dressy suits. Velvetene is also finding favor and is being used for sport wear. Soft wool velvets, poplins, serges and broadcloths are also in good demand. Fur continues to be used very largely on all grades of suits, from the very cheap to the most expensive. A few houses recently brought out some suits that had only the collars and cuffs of fur and these were detachable. The furs that are finding favor are seal, mole skunk and skunk opossum. Other furs are also occasionally employed, these including fox, raccoon, chinchilla and unspotted ermine.
